Surgical Garments

After your surgery

This handout explains compression garments, which are worn after surgery to help keep swelling down.

Why do I need to wear a surgical garment?

Some examples of a surgical garment are surgical bra, abdominal binder, or compression shorts. Wearing a surgical garment after surgery can have many purposes: to decrease swelling, help with pain, and to prevent fluid buildup. Discuss why you may need this with your surgeon.

How long do I need to wear the garment?

- Wear the surgical garment you were given 24 hours a day, 7 days a week for 4 weeks. Only take the garment off to wash it or to do daily hygiene.
- Your provider may ask you to continue wearing the garment for more than 4 weeks. This will be determined during your post-surgical follow-up appointment.

What to expect?

- You will wake up in a surgical garment, if it is needed. This is billed to your insurance. Many insurance companies will cover at least part of the cost of one surgical garment. You do not need to bring the garment to your surgery.
- This handout provides resources if you would like multiple options while recovering at home.

Where can I buy these garments?

There are many websites to buy garments. It's best to use the search terms below and enter via a search engine like www.google.com.

You also may go in person to a vendor. Please ask our team for a list of vendors in your area.

What garment do I need to buy?
